but sure process of enlightenment mankind has been made just, virtuous, and intelli-gent. We are not so blind to the grievous taken for the standard, to believe that this millennium day is likely to dawn very soon. Alasi it is far enough off, so far indeed as to cause the most passionate believer in human progress to doubt sometimes whether it is possible for the race of mus to attain a very high dagree of perfection. But these are moments of depression, produced by a contemplation of the magnitude of the work to be done, and the painfully slow progress made in doing it. magnitude of the work to be done, and up-pealntilly allow progress made in doing it. It has taken centuries upon centuries to bring us where we now are, and it is the knowledge that all past history, human and ante-human, resolves itself into one broad.

ante-human, resolves itself into one broad deady stream of progress, that inspires us with a firm faith in the future, and makes us say with the pool:
"For I doubt not through the ages one increasing

The rate, amount and character of our progress in well-being, which is eirilization, absolutely depends upon the number and force of these influences. They cannot be too rapidly multiplied; they cannot be too rapidly multiplied; they cannot be too realously and laberally fostered. Whoever heard of such a thing as lavishing too much money and effort upon those agencies which conduce to mental, moral and artistic glory? It is indicrously absurd to suppose that too many good influences can be placed in the pathway of men. It will be time enough to feel slarmed on this point when the development of a still higher type of manhood and womanhood ceases to be the highest sim and object of life.

iding-coat has decomely one in the figure and coramented with revers, broad entils and large buttons.

This coat when made in velves is ent with side panniers instead of expels, and very richly trimmed with black less at the wains and across the shoulders, terminating in a contrast of the back. The acro bows in this white sairs, and the garment when complete is called a fairquise coat.

Another very handsoms and more useful velvet clock is made almost exactly fitte a gentleman's dress coat, only lappels are ra-her narrow and are turned back in rever over a round postered upper skirt. This clock has this advantage, that the skirs and coat are separate from each other and can be worn together or separate.

The popular styles this season, spart from mick, which always leds, are black or white Asirscan. The Asirscan, friegod with goal's halv, with muff to match, consitiute the most uneful and economical set of furn which have been seen for a long time, because with such the most distinct and concert purposes; the black Astracan forms a most distinguished street grament, but should always be worn with muff to match. There are also collars bordered with a deep fringe, which, with the muff, constitute a handsome and inexpensate set for those who do not want a cloak. An ordinary cloak, with muff, costs fifty dollars; a collar, with

With black silk tollettes, or red silk trimmed with black lace, gold lewe'ry is worn of a deep color called the Abyeshnian gold. The designs color called the Abyeshnian gold. The designs heavily ringed.

Little scariet sallor lacksts are the rage now among young isdies.

Hats are more fashionable for street wear than bonnets. The high-crowned Tyrolesan hais are the favorite skyle in light gray or black felt, or black straw, bound with relvet and trimmed with a broad-ribbed ribboc, a plume of short fastiers, which curl over the irrod, and an immense let or steel buckle.

It is fashionable to attach a long game vali of the color to black and gray felt bast at the back, and wear passed around the neck and put through in a knot on one side.

Quite a number of tickets in the grand prise drawing for the benefit of the new Dominiona church have been issued and are meeting with a very ready sale. In fact, we learn that so far the Rev. Fasher Meagher, who has superissensience of the affair, has been applied to for all the tickets which he could obtain from the press of the printer. They are beautifully got up in bask-note form, and issued in books, each centaining twenty-five. These will be sent to the different places of sale and when so dithe blant attached will be flighed out, with the name and residence of the buyer, and number of the ticket, sad then returned to Father Meagher, who issmediately registers it in a book kept for that purpose. The many little intricacies of the drawing have been arranged, and Father Meagher.
